domain authority of 59

The Challenge

We started working with a software reviews company client in 2019. They had recently lost around 50% of their organic traffic, which directly impacted their bottom line. They knew they needed to do something “extra” beyond just publishing great content (which they were already doing) in order to move ahead of their competitors in the tight B2B software niche.

When we started working with this client they already had a few hundred backlinks to their website, but the average Domain Authority was low, as were the overall quality of the links.

Our Strategy

Contextual Links in High Domain Authority Publications

Over the next six months, we built 60 high authority links with an average domain authority of 59, leveraging our relationships at high-authority publications. These are situations where we have relationships with journalists and publishers at top publications, relationships we've spent years building.

The Results

We were able to show a 2x increase in both traffic and conversions (revenue) for all ERP-related traffic over a six-month period.

The return on investment for this campaign was over 8x.
